45. Germantown

Goss Avenue, Eastern Parkway, Shelby Street, St. Michael's Cemetery

This neighborhood was one of three in the city settled primarily by German immigrants and their descendants. The area was subdivided in 1850 and modest workers' houses were constructed, a prevalent style being the camelback shotgun. St. Michael's Cemetery, with its domed chapel, has served the community since 1850.

46. Mulberry Hill / George Rogers Clark Park

Preston to Eastern Parkway to Poplar Level Road to Thruston

Gen. George Rogers Clark selected this site for his parents' house because of its fresh spring water and fertile soil. The large log house with slope-shouldered stone chimneys served as residence for Clark as well until 1803. The house was demolished during WWI for the construction of Camp Taylor. George Rogers Clark Park is now located at the site, with a Clark family graveyard still on the property.

47. Audubon Park

Preston Street, Camp Taylor, Poplar Level Road and Hess Lane

This picturesque suburb was begun in 1912 as a residential development for the Audubon Park country club and golf course established in 1907. The suburb is located on part of the original land grant given to Gen. William Preston from King George III of England. Designed by landscape architect Frederick Law Olmsted's firm, the winding roads are named after bird species, in honor of John James Audubon's studies of native fowl.

48. Fishpools Plantation

9710 Preston Highway at I-265

This farmsite is named for the "fishpools" located at the site when it was settled by Col. James Francis Moore in the 1780s. The cluster of natural springs which served as a breeding ground for fish was a southern Jefferson County landmark. The original log cabin was incorporated into the main house, built in the first quarter of the 19th century.

Newburg Road

This road was originally called the Newburgh Turnpike. The road provided an access south, and may have been used as an alternate southern route when Preston Street Plank Road would have been flooded by the Wet Woods. The road connected to the Louisville and Shepherdsville Plank Road near the southern county line. A tollgate was located near Calvary Cemetery at present-day Eastern Parkway and Newburg Road.

49. Tyler Park

Bardstown Road, Baxter Avenue, Grinstead Drive, Eastern Parkway

This early 20th century neighborhood features a variety of architectural styles including American Foursquare, Bungalow, and Prairie School. A small Olmsted-designed urban park of the same name is bisected by Baxter Avenue. An arched stone bridge at the roadway links the park together.

50. 1212 Castlewood

Castlewood at Barret Avenue

Little is known about this two-story brick, double-pile residence. The mid-19th century house is accented by flat jack arches and a Gothic Revival bargeboard at the eaves.

51. Howard House

Bates Court

Eastern Parkway to Barret Avenue to Bates Court

The Howard House, constructed in the early 19th century, is executed in the Federal style of architecture. Winthrop Allen, a real estate developer, purchased the house in the 1920s and renovated it. He then subdivided the land on either side of the narrow entry road. Early 20th century houses occupy surrounding lots on the court.
